VOLUNTEER

VOL – 914

Personal Conduct

Issued: July 8, 2014

Positive attitude, proper courtesy, and conduct on and off the job are important to the individual as well as the District. Neatness of work performed is also important. All volunteers are engaged in public relations. Some deal directly with the public. Others, while not in direct personal contact, do perform work under the public eye. District volunteers, regardless of whether contacts are direct or indirect are expected to be courteous, efficient, and helpful in all their assignments. Favorable impressions created by volunteers' public behavior help develop good will and support for District services.
